Ove was a child growing up in the mountains, he remembers the naivety through looking back at old photos.

1989

In Adulthood Ove's passion for the mountains intensified. He recalls fondly the times he spent hiking and exploring with friends. He was impressed with how photography had progressed to be so portable and was often remarked upon how color photographs added life to his shots and made the recollection of the experience more real.

Ove now has dementia and struggles to recall past events. He really liked a digital photo frame that his granddaughter gave him as a Christmas gift years ago. He now has a room in his house where 3D printing enables past events to be replayed and he is able to engage with all the actors.
